Notes:

Arrived on location at 15:10 CT, 4/16/14. Weather conditions: 25 degrees F, wind E 10-20 mph, light snow. Observed site and took photos. It appeared as if the release occurred near the northeast corner of the well pad and had been contained by an earthen berm that had been placed up-gradient (north) of a culvert that directed waters toward the outside, southeastern portion of the well pad. No evidence of impact was observed up-gradient of the berm. Evidence of the release was noted on a petroleum-stained absorbent boom near the earthen berm. Follow up with company contact to determine disposal of absorbent boom and any impacted soil.
