What is an Autism Spectrum Disorder?

Autism spectrum disorder (ASD) is a group of developmental disabilities that can cause significant social, communication, and behavioral challenges.

“Autism spectrum disorder (ASD) is a complex developmental disability; signs typically appear during early childhood and affect a person’s ability to communicate and interact with others. ASD is defined by a certain set of behaviors and is a “spectrum condition” that affects individuals differently and to varying degrees. There is no known single cause of autism, but increased awareness and early diagnosis/intervention and access to appropriate services/supports lead to significantly improved outcomes. Some of the behaviors associated with autism include delayed learning of language; difficulty making eye contact or holding a conversation; difficulty with executive functioning, which relates to reasoning and planning; narrow, intense interests; poor motor skills and sensory sensitivities. Again, a person on the spectrum might follow many of these behaviors or just a few, or many others besides. The diagnosis of autism spectrum disorder is applied based on analysis of all behaviors and their severity.”

-The National Autism Society (www.autism-society.org/what-is/)

Specialty Health Services

For nearly all children on the autism spectrum, evaluation by an experienced team of professionals is necessary for an accurate diagnosis and optimal treatment plan. Families are essential partners to the team, as they are the principle caregivers and center of strength and support for children.

Diagnostic Clinics

Altru's Pediatric Developmental Clinic

This clinic serves children considered to be at risk for developmental issues. Located in Altru's Main Clinic, the Pediatric Developmental Clinic integrates physical and occupational therapy screenings, as well as nutrition services with the child's physician appointment. Together, the team determines if the child has a need for additional services.

The diagnostic team includes a pediatrician, behavior support coordinator, occupational therapist, and speech language pathologist. The evaluation is conducted in a clinical setting utilizing formal and informal assessment tools. Clinics are held twice monthly in Jamestown at the Anne Carlsen Center; each child is typically seen over the course of half of a day. Family members are present during the evaluation to answer questions and offer insight. Families meet with the team that same day to discuss results. For more information, visit www.annecarlsen.org.

MSSNG

MSSNG aims to sequence the complete genomes of 10,000 individuals affected by autism and their families. Autism Speaks is collaborating with Google to store sequenced data from MSSNG on the Google Cloud Platform, providing an open resource for scientists worldwide to access and share ASD research. MSSNG is a significant milestone in advancing genomic research of ASD and could lead to breakthroughs in causes, subtypes, and better diagnosis and treatment for the disorder. For more information, visit www.mss.ng/#.

Interventions for Autism Spectrum Disorders

There are a number of behavioral and educational interventions currently available for individuals with ASD. Not every treatment may be appropriate for every child.

One way to determine if a particular treatment may be effective is to evaluate the research. The National Standards Report from the National Autism Center (NAC) utilizes a Strength of Evidence classification system to demonstrate the NAC's confidence about the efficacy of a specific intervention. Ratings reflect the quality, quantity, and consistency of research findings. The National Standards Report can be found online at autismpdc.fpg.unc.edu/node/21.

It is also important that you speak with your child's physician to discuss the different therapy options.

OCALI's mission is to build state and system-wide capacity to improve outcomes through leadership, training and professional development, technical assistance, collaboration, and technology. Visit www.ocali.org/ for more information.

Free training modules on various interventions are located at www.autisminternetmodules.org/user_mod.php.

The University of North Carolina TEACCH Autism Program

This university-based system of community regional centers offers a set of core services along with unique demonstration programs meeting the clinical, training, and research needs of individuals with ASD, their families, and professionals. The TEACCH Autism Program provides clinical services such as diagnostic evaluations, parent training and parent support groups, social play and recreation groups, individual counseling for higher-functioning clients, and supported employment. In addition, TEACCH Autism Program conducts training nationally and internationally and provides consultation for teachers, residential care providers, and other professionals from a variety of disciplines. Learn more at www.teacch.com/.

Many interventions exist for ASD; yet, scientific research has found only some of these interventions to be effective. The interventions that researchers have shown to be effective are called evidence-based practices (EBPs). One reason for using EBPs is because, by law, teaching practices must be based on evidence of effectiveness. Learn more at autismpdc.fpg.unc.edu/node/19.

Early Intervention (Infant Development)

This is a service designed to help families with children from birth to age three with disabilities and/or developmental delays. The goal of this program is to support the child and their family in gaining skills and fully participating in their natural environment. By partnering with families, ND Early Intervention provides them with the tools and support they need to help their child be successful. Qualifying families have access to a wide array of therapeutic professionals, as well as a Service Coordinator (DD Program Manager) and an Experienced Parent. Anyone, including family members, can refer a child for a free developmental evaluation, with eligibility based on the following criteria:

- Displays a 50 percent delay in any area of development (cognition, communication, motor, self-help or social emotional skills).
- Displays a 25 percent delay or more in any two areas of development.
- Has a diagnosis or disability that impairs typical development.
- Has a significant health condition that puts them at high risk for developmental delays.

Another component to ND Early Intervention is Right Track. Right Track provides a variety of services to families, which include developmental screenings, referrals to community resources, serving as a resource to parents, etc. To make a referral, or to learn more, call the Developmental Disabilities Division at 800.755.8529 or visit

Pediatricians and Family Doctors

All children benefit from a medical home. A medical home is not a building, but rather an approach to providing comprehensive medical care. In a medical home, a physician or other medical provider works in partnership with the family/patient to assure that the medical and non-medical needs of the child/youth are met. Through this partnership, medical providers can help the families access and coordinate specialty care, educational services, out-of-home care, family support, and other public and private community services that are important to the overall health of the child and family. Contact CSHS at 701.328.2436 for a list of primary doctors who practice in ND.
